The rain that set in after the military manageres had begun made a complete change in the programme. There was time to watch the pitching of a shelter camp by soldiers of the garrison, but the infantry drill, with music, was interrupted

The escort to the colors and dress parade, which had been counted on as the great feature of the afternoon, had to be given up, but dancing in Corbin Hall, where tea was served, took the place of this promised attraction. The music was by the band of the Third Battalion, Twenty-minth Infantry, assisted by the united military bands of New York harbor.

FLAGLER'S ONLY SON NOT A BUSINESS MAN

Speculation as to His Part in Control of His Father's Great Estate.

STORY OF ESTRANGEMENT

Harry Harkness Flagler is 42, Devoted to Music and Lives at 32 Park Avenue.

Much interest was expressed yesterday y men of financial affairs as to the part Harry Harkness Flagler will play in the disposition of the great fortune of his father, Henry M. Flagler, estimated to be more than $60,000,000.

Harry Harkness Flagler is 42 years old. He has been little known in connection with the work of his father either in the Standard Oil Company or in the great development plans carried on in Florida.

It was said yesterday by men who have had close acquaintance with the affairs of Mr. Flagler that the son and the father had been estranged for a long period and that for ten years they had not spoken until last Monday, the day before Mr. Flagler died, when the younger Mr. Flagler arrived at Palm Beach from Europe in time to see his father alive.

Harry Harkness Flagler, though a man of acknowledged business capacity, has never engaged in business. He has kept singularly aloof from the affairs of the Standard Oil Company. He never showed nterest in the Florida Railroad and interest in the Florida Railroad and hotel plans of his father, so far as is known. At the age of 22, with a large career in business before him if he chose, it was regarded as doubtful that he would ever go into business. His temperament is artistic and his nature is one of excessive delicacy. As a child, it was said, he preferred play with girls rather than with boys. He is interested in music and was secretary of the Permanent Orchestra Fund Committee in 1903, which planned for enlargement and development of the Philhartnonic Society.

Fund Committee in 1903, which planned for enlargement and development of the Philhartmonic Society.

It was held yesterday that a possible reason for the trusting of the Flagler estate lay in the divergance of interests of the son and the father. It was conjectured that the elder Flagler decided that his plans for further development of Florida, which it is believed he caused to be drawn up when he was ill, could be better carried out under the direction of trustees in close association with his life activities than in any other way.

Young Mr. Flagler is Columbia University man of the class of 1894. He is a son of Mr. Flagler's first wife, who was a member of the Standard Oil family of Harkness. He married Miss Anna Lamont in 1893. His town house is at 32 Park avenue. He lives modestly and though a member of the Union League and Calumet clubs is rarely seen in club life.

St. Augustine, Fla., May 22.—The will of Henry M. Flagler has not been filed. His legal residence was in this city, which is in St. John's county, but the will may be filed in any county where he had property.

It is suggested that all the Borough Presidents and the Commissioner of Wayne, Ind. Health be authorized to utilize such power plants as are available in all th public buildings of their boroughs to carry out the proposed plan.

President McAneny believes that ic manufactured by the city could be retailed on the East Side and in other congested quarters at cost.

President McAneny's engineers tel him that the power plant of he Hall of Records, which is already equipped with a refrigerating outfit of the absorption type, "could be readily adapted to the manufacture of ice and rendered capable of producing approximately twenty-five tons of ice a day. If it were sold in blocks averaging twenty five pounds it would supply 2,000 families."

A Barnard undergraduate caused excite-ment on Morningside Heights yesterday afternoon and made it necessary for the police to take a hand in restoring order about the Columbia University grounds. scraped up the dust five or six feet behind, surmounted by a jacket embroidered with the letters Theta Kappa Alpha in orange. She wore a Hessian hat and carried in one hand a small red parasol. With the other hand she waved a yellow and red flag. The girl walked down Broadway to 118th street and then turned east to the Columbia library, in front of which she stopped to buy a bag of peanuts. By this time she was the centre of a crowd of Columbia undergraduates. After buying the peanuts she started for the library building, but Henry Meyers, the guardian of Columbia's peace, shooed her down the steps just as a policeman came along. Meyers saw that she got safely to her room in Brooks Hall. None of the Barnard undergraduates would say a word about the affair.
